The Graduate Department of Clinical Psychology of George Fox University is pleased to host its

NINTH ANNUAL ASSESSMENT CONFERENCE

Friday, June 8, 2012

Northwest Psychological Assessment Conference

Those attending the conference will update their assessment and treatment skills related to anger disorders (e.g., bullying), as well as their knowledge of the newly released MMSE-2.

All presentations are appropriate for licensed psychologists, certified school psychologists, counselors, as well as students in graduate training programs in these areas. CE certificates (six hours) of attendance will be provided.

Assessment and Treatment of Anger, Aggression & Bullying in Children and Adults

- Understand how anger symptoms are co-morbid with DSM-IV Axis I and Axis II disorders, but no disorder is sufficiently co-morbid to account for anger symptoms
- Understand how anger and aggression are represented in most psychological assessments for children, adolescents, and adults, and how these assessments can be done better
- Learn about using the Anger Disorders Scale and the Anger Regulation and Expression Scale
- Understand how results from an anger assessment can help identify which cognitions elicit anger, why they are resistant to change, and how to replace them
- Understand how anger is learned and represented in the brain differently from anxiety, and how this influences therapeutic interventions
- Learn to implement Motivational Interviewing and other strategies that review the consequences and alternatives to anger, to increase the angry clients' motivation to change
- Learn to implement exposure and behavioral rehearsal interventions with angry clients

The Mini-Mental State Examination – 2nd Edition

- Learn about the new MMSE-2 formats, features and alternative versions
- Understand many of the clinical applications for the new edition

ABOUT THE PRESENTERS

Dr. Ray DiGiuseppe received his PhD from Hofstra University and completed a postdoctoral fellowship at the Albert Ellis Institute. DiGiuseppe is professor and chairperson of the psychology department at St. John's University. He is a fellow of the American Psychological Association's divisions of Psychotherapy, Clinical, School and Family Psychology. DiGiuseppe has contributed to the scientific and clinical literature with six books, more than 120 chapters and articles, and hundreds of conference presentations. He has developed standards for identifying anger disorder as coauthor of two psychological tests: The Anger Disorders Scale (for adults) and the Anger Regulation and Expression Scale (for children and adolescents). His present scholarship focuses on clinical aspects of anger and rational emotive and cognitive behavior therapies. He and his wife have four children, ages 13 through 28, and he cooks great risotto!

Dr. Joel Gregor received his PsyD from George Fox University and is the clinical director of the university's Behavioral Health Clinic that serves as a community-based, GDCP training site for practicum students and interns. Before assuming this leadership role, Gregor worked at the Oregon State Hospital and other hospitals and children's outpatient clinics. His clinical work focuses on assessment and treatment for the chronically mentally ill and for children and families. He lives with his wife, daughter and son in the beautiful Dundee hills and loves to watch and discuss cinema.
