

About the University Players

The George Fox University Players continue a 30-year tradition of bringing thought-provoking drama to schools, churches and prisons. Through the years, this touring company of young men and women has presented a wide variety of music and drama to hundreds. Each program is designed to benefit a specific audience, whether it is for elementary-school children, a youth group, or an entire church congregation.

Director

Bryan Boyd is a theatre artist and professor at George Fox University, where he directs the University Players and runs the design and technical theatre program. In addition to more than 50 shows at George Fox, Bryan has designed scenery and lighting for professional theatres in the Northwest, including Artists Repertory Theatre, Sound Theatre Company, Seattle Music Theatre, Broadway Rose Theatre Company, and Northwest Children's Theatre. In addition, Bryan has toured nationwide as an actor with the one-man play Damien and been named a Celebrated Teaching Artist by the Kennedy Center. In the summer, Bryan runs the Theatre Design Institute, a series of graduate courses for high school theatre teachers.

University Theatre Mission Statement

The University Theatre department is dedicated to cultivating artistic integrity in its students and its programs as we explore the craft of theatre in a Christ-centered environment. Our mission is to offer a safe, disciplined and nurturing theatre program that prepares artists to make meaningful contributions to our world.

GEORGE FOX
UNIVERSITY PLAYERS

The George Fox University Players explore the theme Looking Up, stories where our everyday lives are interrupted, we lift our heads and see something new. When we have the presence of mind to put down our screens and arrive into the here and now. When our attention is captured by a neighbor, a friend or a stranger standing in front of us. When we look up and can't help but be stunned by this amazing, beautiful world.
