I graduated from George Fox University in 2007 and consistently reflect upon the growth I experienced while being a part of the mission of being a Christ-centered community that prepares students spiritually, academically, and professionally to think with clarity, act with integrity, and serve with passion. I received and now I get to be a part of giving. I started developing courses and teaching at George Fox University in 2018. I've been in many learning environments, and being a part of George Fox is really a special opportunity.

Teaching and developing people and organizations are a passion of mine. I am a strong advocate for integrating learning with real life application. The Department of Professional Studies (DPS) is committed to making the learning experience easily translated to the workplace, home, and community.

Academic Background

- MBA, Strategy, Finance, and Leadership, Pepperdine Graziadio Business School
- MPA, Program and Project Management, Keller Graduate School of Management
- BA, Business and Biblical Studies, George Fox University

Expertise and Interests

I recently completed a second master's degree from Pepperdine University (MBA). While I aspire to doctoral study, I am still unclear on what I want to focus on. My current research interests are globalization, strategic management, macro-organizational behavior, economic sociology and behavioral economics.

I am currently a sr project manager for Amentum (Formerly AECOM). My experience is in both the private and public sectors. I have over a decade of project management, project controls and business management experience. In addition, I have multiple active certifications (PMP, Lean Six Sigma Green Belt).

Outside the Classroom

I am married with two great kids. I enjoy sports, mentoring, traveling to new places and studying business strategy, culture and organizations.
