

Julia P. Hood, PhD

Adjunct Faculty

Email: Julia.hoodphd@gmail.com

I have worked for over two decades in higher education. I have assisted several colleges and universities with developing online degree programs for graduate and undergraduate students. I am the cofounder of Eleven Evergreen – a leadership consulting and development community dedicated to making leadership learning accessible to everyone. I also serve as the Editor-In-Chief for Everyday Leader, an online magazine published by Eleven Evergreen, offering stories about leadership learning from all walks of life.

Academic Background

- PhD, Organizational Management and Leadership, Capella University
- MS, Organizational Communication, The College of New Rochelle
- BS, Communication, Nyack College

Expertise and Interests

My main areas of research and publication are servant leadership, women in leadership, organizational change, and organizational culture.

Outside the Classroom

I live in New York – about an hour north of Manhattan – with my husband and our two young sons. Both my husband and I are college professors and we have collaborated on several research studies and publications. I always say he is my favorite co-author.

We love to travel and are always looking for ways to incorporate our research into travel. My favorite trip was a summer we spent in Italy working on a research study investigating leadership themes in Renaissance art.