

Ron Miller, MEd

Adjunct Faculty

Email: rmiller@georgefox.edu

My career began in the business world in 1974 as a shift foreman for a national company. In 1976, I was offered a position at the central purchasing office. The purchasing manager was a believer and managed the department based on servant principles. These principles have been a hallmark of my purchasing career 40+ years later. Acting as a servant towards all people is biblical and represents the heart of our Lord. Mentoring staff requires I exhibit these traits every day. My purposeful intent is to communicate this lifestyle to my coworkers and the students at George Fox University.

Academic Background

- MEd, Corban University
- BA, Management and Communication, Western Baptist College

Expertise and Interests

I have over 40 years of progressive and successful leadership experience in purchasing systems, project management, quality assurance, customer service, government service, and people management. I have a demonstrated ability to work in different phases of the organization through process improvement, budget control, and human resource management, coupled with mature communications and problem solving skills:

- Project Management
- Soliciting Requirements
- Scope Development
- Contract Writing
- Estimate Development
- Project Planning
- Business Writing
- Use Case Development
- RFP/RFI/Proposal

Outside the Classroom

I have a wonderful wife of 46 years. Four children and eleven grandchildren keep us entertained and blessed. My church is a focal point with opportunities to serve. Reading tops my hobby list, and I have had the thrill of sharing books with my oldest granddaughter coupled with lively discussions!