

Healing from the Effects of Interpersonal Trauma: An Integrative Play Therapy-Family Therapy Approach for Young Children

Neurobiological and developmental aspects of interpersonal trauma will be discussed in support of an integrated, research-informed, humanistic, and culturally responsive approach to facilitating healing in children who have experienced early interpersonal/relationship trauma. Through experiential activities and case/video examples, Dr. Bratton will illustrate the timing and course of the therapeutic process grounded in Child-Centered Play Therapy (CCPT) and Child Parent Relationship Therapy (CPRT).

Learning objectives:

After the workshop, participants will be able to:

1. Name two neurodevelopmental considerations in providing play therapy for children with a history of early interpersonal trauma
2. Discuss two rationales for using an integrated CCPT/CPRT approach for this population of children
3. Discuss two guidelines for clinical decision-making regarding timing of play therapy and family work for this population
4. Name two strategies for successfully involving caregivers in the play therapy treatment process
